. . boring . . or even a sad one. It can be a song, animation, presentation . . . whatever you can think of. Once you have the loop file (from YouTube or elsewhere), you can start editing. The loop can be trimmed to around 1 minute (a good start). It can be stretched as long as you want, or even shortened. The final result should be a short clip with the original soundtrack and the mood you have chosen. You can also cut it into two pieces, for example, and then link them together by color matching, add an intro and outro, or make it a YouTube mashup. You can save it and upload it to your channels. Each of your creations have to be named to get better search results on YouTube and other channels. If your video is very popular, you can get more views on Coub and embed it on your channel. Mucinous peritoneal dialysis (PD)-related peritonitis (PDRP) can lead to significant adverse events (AEs), including exit-site infection (ESI), and is difficult to diagnose, especially in low-grade infections. This study examined the clinical characteristics of PDRP and non-mucinous PDRP. We enrolled 72 patients with PDRP from a single medical center between June 2010 and November 2015. We recorded the peritonitis etiology, clinical presentations, culture results, PD usage, peritonitis treatment, and outcomes. We categorized the patients into two 82157476af
